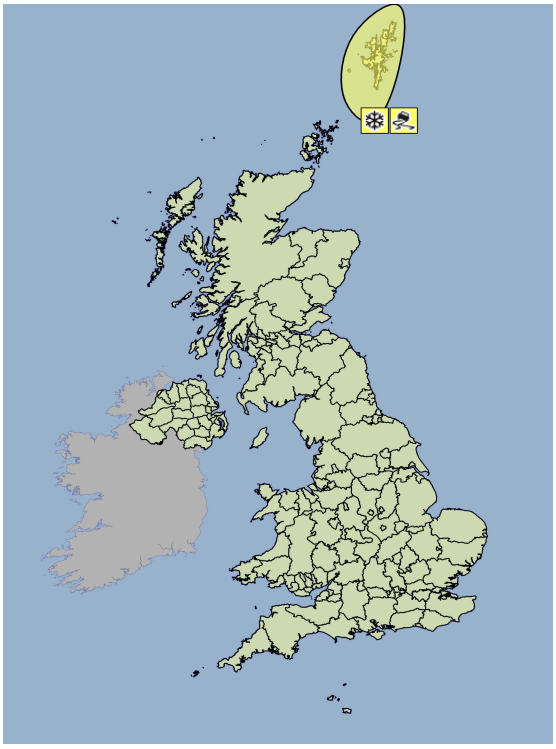
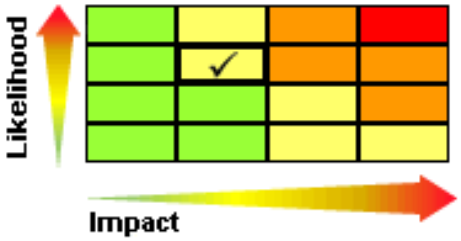
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
Cold northerly winds will bring frequent showers to Shetland and these are expected to become heavier and more organised overnight as a trough runs south through the flow on Wednesday night and Thursday morning.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Snow and Ice

Valid from 17:00 on Wed, 24th Feb 2016 until 12:00 on Thu, 25th Feb 2016

Snow showers will become heavier and more frequent on Wednesday night and during Thursday morning, giving 5 to 10 cm of snow in places. In addition, a widespread frost will lead to icy patches forming on untreated surfaces.

Please be aware that the icy stretches and snow may lead to some difficult traveling conditions and some low level disruption.
